My Mountain Experience

One of the easiest mountains I've climbed is Ben Nevis in Scotland. It's more like a big hill than a mountain, really. It's only 1,344 metres high, and it only takes about three hours to walk up it. We climbed it in the autumn last year, on a bright day. You go into a valley, cross a river, and then follow all the other walkers to the top. But you should be careful with the weather, because it can change very suddenly, and then it's easy to have an accident.

The most dangerous mountain I've climbed is in Norway. It's called Glittertind and it's about 2,500 metres high. Because it's quite far from the roads, you have to walk a long way before you can start climbing. I started at 8.00 in the morning on a warm day, but then the weather suddenly got bad. I fell on some ice that I didn't see and I couldn't get up. It was really scary; there was nobody around, and I spent four hours there. Eventually, another climber appeared and helped me come back down. I was very lucky!

The most amazing mountain I've climbed is Mount Merapi on the island of Java. This is an active volcano, which I climbed with some Indonesian friends. The weather there is much hotter and wetter than in Europe, so we climbed at night. It was still night when we got to the top, and then we saw the sun come up. And we saw the tops of four or five other volcanoes above the clouds. Amazing!
